File size: 362.995 KB If you found any wrong file please comment below. A: You can use the find command in a bit of a roundabout way. sudo find /media/user/Music/ -type d | grep -v "\.snapshot" | xargs -I {} bash -c 'if [ -d {} ]; then rm -r {}/Music ; fi' This will search through your music files on the filesystem (/media/user/Music/) and remove them, if they are directories. The -type d will look for directories and not just files, so that's why we remove the .snapshot files. Then, we remove all of the directories that were found, but only directories, so that only the music files are removed. Finally, we place a -I {} on the command line. {} is replaced with the argument we want to pass to xargs. If we were to do it without xargs, it would look like this: sudo find /media/user/Music/ -type d | grep -v "\.snapshot" | xargs -I {} bash -c 'if [ -d {} ]; then rm -r {}/Music ; fi' This would mean bash -c 'if [ -d {} ]; then rm -r {}/Music ; fi' would be run for each directory, which we don't want. Photo by JEFF BOUSHIE Students killed by police in Baton Rouge last year made not one, but two, attempts to reach out to the justice system while they were alive. And, if those two attempts hadn't been enough, when they died, their friends and families had enough information to file lawsuits against the police officers involved and the city of Baton Rouge. In fact, police officers who were involved in the fatal shooting of LaTisha Nixon, DeEbony Groomes and Andrew Geyer on July 7, 2016 have been sued by their family members and the two surviving friends, Kamarmani Wright and Christopher Few. Nixon was a 30-year-old Baton Rouge mother of three. Groomes, a 23-year-old event coordinator, and Geyer, a 25-year-old a licensed security guard, were shot and killed by members of the Baton Rouge Police Department less than an hour apart. The three friends attended Louisiana State
